Task 4: In-class Presentation and Intergroup Website Evaluation

Suppose you are selling your implemented website to your customer.

During the lecture on 14th December, each group will give a short presentation (6-8 minutes) of the website it designed and implemented. The presentation should consist of two parts:

- The introduction of the website including the objective and user, the functionality, the organization and structure, the colour and typography, the usability evaluation, and some other features you would like to highlight during design and implementation, and why you think the design and implementation of your website is successful.
- A demonstration of the website with at least two testing cases.

The usability and quality of the website will also be evaluated by other groups.

Deliverable

This deliverable has 3 parts.

- In-class presentation on 14th December.
- A marking sheet evaluating the work of other groups. This sheet will be distributed to each group before the start of the lecture on 14th December and collected at the end of the lecture.
- The slides of the presentation to be submitted to QMPlus by midnight Friday 15th December 2017. The last slide includes the information of the team members,
    - o   name and surname
    - o   student ID
    - o   login
    - o   email
    - o   Contribution (optional)

Marking scheme

The marking consists of two parts.

- 40%: the grades from other groups.
- 60%: the grade from the Module organizer.

Tips:

While the quality of the website is important, a clean and well structured presentation also tends to attract a higher appraisal.
